DESECRATION

OF THE DEAD.

We have had something to say of the El Paso Herald's general want of familiarity with political conditions in this territory, but that is even less reprehensible than the comment of the El Paso Times upon the result of the election in which it applies cheap epithets to the defeated republican candidates.

If the Times had been concerned in anyway in the contest which ended victoriously for the democracy of Arizona, its treatment of the vanquished would be ungenerous, barbarous, and we were on the point of saying, an exhibition of backwoods, old-time journalism.

No Arizona democrat, whose liver and brains are in good working order, entertains such sentiments toward the late republican candidates as the Times has grossly discharged.

They are republicans; they are Arizonians and they entered bravely upon a hopeless fight and fought bravely to the end. We have sometimes thought that they knew themselves; they had no chance of winning. Perhaps, hypnotized by excitement, they thought toward the end they saw success, but nobody else did.

However, they are honorable gentlemen, all well thought of throughout Arizona. They stood for things which we assume they believed to be right. They went down to defeat and it is the belief of all civilize Arizona democrats that they should be held in respectful memory and that their remains should be given decent, Christian burial. The Times, however, seems to be inclined to desecration.

Senator Ingalls once observed, moved to it by the cackling of Kansas females who, in the exercise of their new-born power had assisted in divesting that statesman of his job, that only Indians and women scalp their dead.

But that was before the time of the Times, otherwise it would have been included in Mr. Ingalls' list of those who find pleasure in atrocity.

NOT A MATTER

OF DOLLARS AND CENTS.

While the Sulzer resolution might have been framed in more diplomatic language, and the direct charge that Russia had violated the terms of the treaty of 1832 might have been omitted, all Americans are in sympathy with the spirit of it, and all will join in the demand for the abrogation of a treaty which fails to secure to all Americans traveling in Russia, the same rights and protection as are accorded to citizens of Russia traveling in this country.

The only surprising thing is that the agitation for the abrogation of the treaty was not begun earlier, or had not gained greater headway.

France is a similar sufferer under a similar treaty. Discrimination has been practiced for years against not only Jewish citizens of France, but also against French Catholic priests. For years the conduct of Russia has been a subject of hot discussion in the Chamber of Deputies but there has been a sufficiently strong anti-Semitic sentiment in France to prevent decisive action such as it is evident will be taken by the United States senate tomorrow, following the adoption of the Sulzer resolution on Wednesday of last week.

But it does not appear that Russia will change its traditional course with respect to the Jews, moved by the threat of abrogation in fact, for thirty years, the representations of this country have been disregarded or have been met by the doctrine that the treaty cannot be construed to alter an internal policy of that country, which by the way, the rest of the world regards as a policy of oppression.

Russia, according to the dispatches of Friday morning, is of the opinion that abrogation of the treaty would result in a financial disadvantage to the United States.

The American people regardless of race, (and race is not recognized among Americans) will not weigh dollars and cents against the abuse of the rights of their fellow citizens at home or abroad.

WHY NOT BEGIN

AT THE BEGINNING?

Here is a man who would begin at the beginning in the solution of the problem of inequality of conditions and the unequal distribution of profit. He writes to the New York American about it and presents a flagrant case of injustice which all of us have witnessed for years with unseeing eyes.

He brings up the relations of the barber and the bootblack. The former who is compelled to pay a high rent and a license for doing business, provides his customer with a comfortable and even luxurious and high priced chair and serves him with a skill born of years of experience. He affords him the comforts and luxuries of a clean towel, soap, talcum powder, bay rum and witch hazel. All this and twenty minutes of time for fifteen cents.

While the skilled artist is working at the end of the victim, a youthful Italian or Greek, not yet a naturalized citizen, or a voter, whose whole stock of skill was required in a month or a week, whose kit represents an investment of less than a dollar, is manipulating his feet. He begins operations after the "barberous" torture is well under way and concludes long before it is finished. He gets ten cents, much of which anyone can see, when he thinks of it, is unearned increment.

Now, that this matter is brought to our attention, here is certainly an inequitable distribution of profit of which congress should be made cognizant.

It is all foolishness to be trying to establish ratio of profit between big business and little business, the barber is excelled in profits by the boot black. The only reasonable way is to begin at the beginning, at the bottom, and take things in their regular order going from bottom to top.

SECOND ARREST MADE FOR CATTLE STEALING

Dick Highfield Is Accused of Partnership with Man Arrested Friday

As a sequel to the arrest of H. L. Bernard at Lowell on Friday charged with stealing another arrest followed yesterday when Constable Bailey drove up to the Spry shaft and took in custody Dick Highfield, whom he claims was a partner of Bernard in the alleged cattle stealing which led to the arrest of both. As was stated yesterday Bernard was arrested on Friday and taken before Justice Murphy charged with stealing a steer from W. H. Neale of the Four Bar ranch. Mr. Neale was notified by the officials of the arrest and came to Bisbee, arriving yesterday morning. Meantime, after the arrest, Constable Bailey, who had been working up the case, continued his investigations with the result that he obtained further evidence which he declares clearly implicates Highfield in the matter as partner with Bernard.

"These cattle thefts must stop," said Constable Bailey yesterday. "I have the goods on these two men. Already we have sent two to the pen for the same offense a few months ago and these two will follow them and so will any other cattle thieves. We are going to stop this sort of thing."

THE CANNIBAL QUEEN

Oh, the cannibal queen
Is a lady, I ween,
Who must live in
A state of content.

She is free from
The fashions and
Of the tight-fisted way
Of the tight-fisted way
Who has plenty to say
On the subject of money that's spent.

If some dame of her set
Happens but to forget
And says catty things of Her Nibs
She can chop off the head
Of the lady instead
Of hearing gossip flims.
She can always collect
Quite a lot of respect
That most men don't hand to their "ribs."

She can wear what she likes
When she goes on her hikes
And no one dares utter a word.
Though her gown is passe
Or is gaudy and gay,
And her hat is a thing quite absurd.
They have got to admit,
There is no doubt about it,
That their monarch is surely a bird.

Straight front she eschews
And she wears no small shoes
And no dresses too tight to be seen
She does not have to wear
Seven bushels of hair
With some shocking rats in between.
We must really confess
In the matter of dress,
There's some class to the cannibal queen.

HOW TO BE HAPPY

Don't eat grape fruit without first
Putting on a rubber suit.
Let somebody else buy and carve
The Christmas Turkey.
Take plenty of exercise, there is
None better than shoveling coal into
The furnace.
Live a long distance away from
Your second cousin.

Have your axes everytime you open
a jackpot.
Give your wife a stipulated sum every week, even if it as high as twenty five cents.

Marry a widow with nine children,
all of whom are working.

Thought for Today

SITTING.

Children at play, keep moving until tired and then drop down on the floor or ground; they sometimes sit on their feet or knee, but almost never of their own accord, use a chair for rest. The school teaches the first principle of child hygiene. Sitting in seats, studying books is about the most unnatural occupation for young children that could be imagined. Light gymnastics frequent change, which some ingenious teachers work into the school regime is a help, but does not go to the root of the evil. Organic education, outdoor and occupational schools are facing in the right direction.

Sedentary occupations break the health; sewing, typewriting, reading, desk work, unless counteracted by lively outdoor recreation, lead to habitually sluggish circulation and slow digestion and nervous exhaustion. The sitting habit steals upon grown-ups unawares. We drop into a chair when it would be better to stand or move about as children do. The trunk muscles are allowed to slump, the waist line disappears, the alertness of youth is gone, old age has come.

If we must sit, great pains should be taken to form correct sitting habit. The hips should rest against the back of a chair, but for the most part it is better to train the muscles of the back and spine to hold the body easily erect as in standing; when the back of the chair is used for change or rest, the small of the back as well as the hips and shoulders should touch it easily, gracefully "sitting" it but not "lolling."

The hip joint is a hinge and we should lean forward from the hips in conversing, reading, sewing or at other work, keeping the chest and abdomen in normal relation, not allowing the body to sag at the waist or double over the shoulders.

Work and Prayer.

Work with all your might; but trust not in the least in your work. Pray with all your might for the blessing of God; but work, at the same time, with all diligence, with all patience, with all perseverance. Pray, then, and work. Work and pray. And still again pray and work, and this all the days of your life.—George Muller.

The Christmas Home Song

by Wilbur D. Nesbit

The heart is singing home again—the heart is singing home,
 Wherever up and down the world the restless feet may roam.
 When comes the time of holly-leaves, of fellowship and mirth,
 That mark the glory of the day the Christ-child came to earth—
 Then all about and all around, on mountain, plain, and foam,
 The heart is singing home again—the heart is singing home.

The wander-love! It leads us on beneath the dreaming star,
 It beckons us with tempting hands from many lands afar;
 It lures us where the lotos dream is filled with rare delight,
 It guides us where the silent snows gleam through the endless night.
 But now, to all who wander far beneath the sky's broad dome,
 The heart is singing home again—the heart is singing home.

It brings a picture of the past—a picture fair and free—
 A picture of the good old home—wherever it may be;
 And o'er the waves it sings to us, across the hill and plain,
 Until the soul within us seems to echo the refrain.
 Wherever up and down the world the restless feet may roam,
 The heart is singing home again—the heart is singing home.

To every man in every place there comes the haunting song,
 It rises like a glory chant, in cadence full and strong.
 To him who sleeps upon his arms before the tireless foe,
 And he who bends above his desk, the coaxing strains must know.
 For, sweeter than the clover-tang that drips from honey comb,
 The heart is singing home again—the heart is singing home.
